

My story is the story of two people who met in a coffee shop and fell in love until they grew old. A clock next to them represents their three different life stages: youth at three, middle age at six and old age at nine. The inspiration of this story comes from an old couple I saw in the cafe of the station. This is the process of their love after I saw them getting along.